Web Description

In 2010, Los Angeles-based artist James Welling began taking a series of color photographs inspired by the painter Andrew Wyeth. Welling started the Wyeth series as an examination of the artist's influence on his own career. This project represents one artist entering the creative mind of another artist. Welling was fascinated and challenged by what he saw in Wyeth's work. In order to experience the physicality of Wyeth's world, Welling went on location in Pennsylvania and Maine and photographed in the same areas where Wyeth painted throughout his life. His goal was not to make a literal record of these subjects, but rather to reference aspects of Wyeth's style, technique and palette. Welling's investigations led him to a greater understanding of the degree of painterly license found in many of Andrew Wyeth's works. In response, Welling digitally manipulated elements of many of his photographs in the studio in order to capture the moods and atmosphere of Wyeth's paintings. This photograph entitled Anna's Kitchen was taken at the Kuerner farm in Chadds Ford, where Anna Kuerner spent much of her life. Anna and her husband Karl were longtime friends of Andrew Wyeth and frequently appeared in his paintings. The yellow walls and wallpaper also make appearances in Wyeth's work such as "Groundhog Day" (1959, Philadelphia Museum of Art).
